She noted that the program would engage startups, entrepreneurs & tech workforce, colleges & universities, middle schools, and high schools. She indicated that the program was unique in that while other cities had components of the program; none had tied them together to create a talent pipeline and grow civically-minded startups. She stated that participants in the program would be introduced to city challenges with various degrees of complexity, via events tailored to their specific group throughout the next 12 months. She noted that in January, the city would issue a Request for Proposals targeted to startups for technology-based solutions to seven civic challenges. She added that the residencies would begin in April and end in July.

EQUITY

Mrs. Sculley provided an update on the FY 2018 Equity Strategy that maximizes the impact of city services toward the vision of prosperity documented in the City's Mission Statement.
